Message From Head of AMO

Dear all,

Time flies and it's been over four months since our last newsletter. We certainly haven't been resting on our laurels, with significant progress being made across a number of workstreams to develop asset recovery and asset management.

Since our last update, our new website, www.amo.police.uk, has gone live; we have continued developing guidance for asset recovery and financial investigation, which will support updates to the College of Policing APP and underpin new Asset Management courses; and we have been working with the Home Office and partners on proposals to add vehicles, high-value clothing and accessories to the definition of listed assets, supported by new guidance currently in development.

We have also continued supporting Police Digital Services (PDS) and NEC Software with the development of the Asset Recovery IT (ARIT) system, including the migration of data from the Joint Asset Recovery Database (JARD), while continuing our work with BlueLight Commercial (BLC) to develop a national procurement framework for asset management.

Alongside this, we have been visiting forces and ROCUs to explain the role of the AMO, discuss how we can support them in the future and gather feedback to help shape how the AMO will serve and support Law Enforcement. We look forward to continuing those conversations at the London Fraud Forum in early November and SOCEX in late November.

Everything we are developing is being shaped through consultation and collaboration and your feedback remains vital to helping us get it right. Thank you for reading and if you'd like to get in touch, our contact details can be found at the bottom of the newsletter.

Asset Management Office (AMO) for Policing and BlueLight Commercial (BLC) Visits to Forces

Throughout September and October, the AMO, in partnership with BLC, visited police forces to provide updates and discuss forthcoming developments in asset management and procurement.

During these visits, the AMO delivered an overview of its role, shared updates on the national approach to asset management, and provided an opportunity for forces to discuss current challenges, opportunities, and best practice.

The programme also introduced the new procurement process commercial strategy being developed by BLC as part of an aspiration for a national contract framework or other national commercial improvements to assist the AMO in achieving better oversight of assets. The commercial strategy and potential routes to market aimed to provide forces with support and key tools when procuring asset management services, while delivering improved value for money, greater efficiency, and enhanced supplier oversight.

By sharing information and gathering feedback from forces, the visits helped ensure the framework reflected operational requirements and supported effective, accountable asset management across policing.

The AMO would like to thank everyone who met with the team during the visits. Your time, support and engagement were greatly appreciated.

Introducing the AMO website

We are pleased to introduce the new Asset Management Office for Policing (AMO) website, providing a dedicated platform to showcase our work and share information with partners and the public in the UK and internationally.

The website will provide a platform for the AMO to share articles, updates and blogs, keeping visitors informed about our work and relevant activity across the sector.

We'll be adding new content regularly, so keep an eye on the website for the latest from the AMO.
